LOCAL SCHOOL OFFERS BENEFITS

Lehigh Valley Charter High School for the Performing Arts and their healthcare provider Highmark Blue Shield are granting full health and dental domestic partner benefits starting August 1st 2007.

A GLBT employee states that the administration was very supportive of his request for the benefits. This serves to remind the community that sometimes the only thing standing between you and DP benefits from your supportive employer is you asking for them.

GLBT CIVIL RIGHTS BILL INTRODUCED IN HARRISBURG

Legislation prohibiting discrimination in Pennsylvania on the bases of sexual orientation and gender identity or expression in housing, employment, and public accommodations was introduced in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives on June 13. The bill, HB 1400, was co-sponsored by a record 70 members of the House. Similar legislation, SB761, was introduced in the Pennsylvania Senate in April with a record number of 22 co-sponsors. The Senate bill has been assigned to the Senate Judiciary Committee and the House bill is expected to go to the House State Government Committee.

What's That About?

Readers write or email "What's That About?" editor Liz Bradbury with questions about GLBT issues.

Dear WTA: I've heard that a lesbian in San Francisco is suing the dating service eHarmony.com because it discriminates against GLBT people. Didn't What's That About write about eHarmony a few years ago. Signed Single but Looking

Dear Single but... Yes, I wrote about eHarmony CEO and far right Christian, Neil "kind of makes your skin crawl" Clark Warren's anti-gay statements that included: "Well, gay marriage isn't legal and we don't want to break the law." And also his links to the radically anti-gay organization Focus on the Family.

Frankly, though some people in the GLBT community think this kind of legal effort is frivolous, I'm positive about this lawsuit for several reasons. I actually read one reply comment that said that there probably wasn't a state law that required eHarmony not to discriminate against gay people. Huh? No law protecting gays in San Francisco? Wrong, laws in S.F. and California require public accommodation nondiscrimination for GLBT people.

That means businesses like eHarmony may not discriminate. After all, this is not a mission driven not-for-profit organization seeking to promote only straight marriages. What if eHarmony was denying services to people because they were practicing Jews or Muslims or Catholics. People don't fully understand that denying services for one minority is the same as denying services for any other minority. This lawsuit brings this to the forefront and educates people about discrimination. Hey, even the Morning Call ISO pages (when they had them) had ads for Men seeking Women, Women seeking Men, Men seeking Men and Women seeking Women.

But the best part of this public lawsuit against this mega company, which blatantly discriminates against GLBT folks, is that Match.com has risen to the occasion. Match.com does not discriminate against GLBT people. In fact one of their branches, Chemistry.com, has begun a major ad campaign riffing off eHarmony's bias in a pro-gay way.

One of Chemistry.com's new ads has a nice looking young guy checking out a Playboy-esque centerfold for a few second, then shaking his head saying, "Nope, still gay." The voice over makes it clear that unlike eHarmony.com, their company is here to help everyone. Exposing discrimination is a good thing. Standing up and saying you are proud of the fact that you don't discriminate, and welcoming minority members who have been disenfranchised, is even better.

SCOTT SAYS

By Scott Laubner

PRIDE AND FUN IN NYC

I was talking to Cora the Coworker. Cora says her family is Catholic so they celebrate Easter according to the Western calendar. But her sister-in-law is Russian Orthodox so they celebrate Easter a little later in the season. So I said, I live in New York and celebrate Pride on the last Sunday in June. But I'm also from Allentown so I celebrate Pride a little later in the season.

One thing about New York, there's always a lot to do. The Tribeca Film Festival ended just in time for the Gay & Lesbian theater festival, which ended just in time for Newfest, the GLBT film festival. Typically Newfest deals with movies that have already been filmed so the last event of Newfest this year was a little different. A staged reading of Another Gay Movie 2: Gays Gone Wild. I don't know if the original came to the Lehigh Valley but I saw it here and became a fan. Try to imagine a gay version of Porky's. It was a movie with a twist. The writer lifted lines right out of Revenge of the Nerds and American Pie. The story revolves around four twinks and their lesbian friend Muffler during their summer between high school and college.

So I went to the reading at the Zipper Theater and listened to the sequel. Located in an old zipper factory on West 37th Street, the theater is just the kind of place I like. With no apologies to Broadway it stands as a bastion to Bohemia. The lobby is full of mismatched furniture, beat up Persian carpets, low lighting, and a fully stocked bar. The walls and curio cabinets are full of dusty New York momentos of by-gone days. There is a Dr. Pepper machine, the kind with the narrow glass door on the left which you have to reach in and take out a glass bottle of soda. There are also floor lamps with beaded shades and hot guys with shaved heads. I get there early and the crowd grows. The reading is supposed to start at seven o'clock. It's 7:16 and we are still waiting in the lobby. Finally we are let in. Some of the seats appear to be originally from automobiles. Bare stage and I mean bare. No back curtain just a back wall in need of a paint job.

Twelve seats are set up on the stage, mismatched of course, for the readers/performers. The author/director gets up on stage. "I finished the script an hour ago" which gets a chuckle from the audience. The original cast take their seats plus special guest readers Rupaul, Lady Bunny and Bianca Leigh, a beautiful drag queen famous in the downtown scene. The sequel is very funny; it took forty-seven years but finally a gay response to Where the Boys Are.

At the end of the reading I mingled and I scored. I got my picture taken with Muffler.

NEWS FROM ADRIAN SHANKER NEW PDN BOARD MEMBER & MUHLBERG COLLEGE STUDENT.

I'm interning for a progressive non profit called Faith In Public Life - the goal of which is to try to strengthen and mobilize the progressive faith community (much like Rabbi Michael Lerner discusses in his book "Left Hand of God")

I was inspired to work for these issues after seeing first hand the strength of the conservative faith communities - everywhere I went, they were united (in opposition) whether it was anti choice protesters at the supreme court, gender essentialists countering the work I was engaged in at GenderPAC, so-called "Family Advocates" at the hill during the Marriage Amendment votes, or war sympathizers during the Israel-Lebanon war. After reading up on the progressive faith communities in books by "The Bush is Burning" by Arthur Waskow, "The Left Hand of God" by Michael Lerner, and "Like Bread on the Seder Plate" by Rebecca Alpert (among other writings) I realized that this movement is all encompassing and has a good chance at ending the conservative monopoly on religion in American life.

Faith in Public Life works as a resource base to strengthen faith groups in their efforts to fight global warming, stop the genocide in the Darfur region of Sudan, end the use of torture, reduce poverty both here and abroad, provide just, comprehensive, and compassionate immigration reform, and guarantee equal civil rights for all people. FPL works with a diversity of progressive faith leaders including Rebecca Alpert, Rev. James Forbes, Rev. Jim Wallis, Rabbi David Saperstein, and many others -- I feel very lucky to work here.

Please check out the website, : www.faitainpubliclife.org. You can read my blog posts, and see my staff bio!!!! Also, I highly recommend signing up for our daily progressive faith news, its one email a day with all the news you need to read! Tzedek Vrachamim (Justice and Compassion), those companies with the highest numbers of female corporate officers had, on average, a 34 % HIGHER return to shareholders than those with the lowest percentage.

The Woman who is easily ANGERED points out AN INCONSISTENCY.

CALL ME CRAZY, BUT DOESN'T IT SEEM THAT COMPANIES WITH WOMEN EXECUTIVES MAKE MORE MONEY?

WOULDN'T it be RATIONAL to CONSIDER this FACTOR WHEN MAKING EMPLOYMENT DECISIONS?

Honey, some habits ARE HARD TO BREAK. HAVE I TOLD you HOW I Love the way you LOOK when righteous ire MAKES your HAIR curl?

SOOZ VIEWS 5

By Sue Sneideringer

Random thoughts this month... Rosie O'Donnell may end up replacing Bob Barker on "The Price Is Right." Since no one seems to object to any of the multitude of ways Rosie puts her MONEY where her MOUTH is, I say go and make another bundle, girlfriend. There are some kids somewhere who will be very grateful for the help you will surely give. The kind that's central to your activism, the kind Bill O'Reilly will, no doubt, forget to mention next time you're the whipping girl du jour.

I predict that one of these days soon, in his continuing quest to be relevant, O'Reilly himself will emerge as a closet secular progressive, right about the time that the dominant political mood leans left of center again.... NBC is courting Jon (Smartest Man on TV) Stewart. Please, please, PLEASE stay on cable, Jon-Boy. Where there is much less danger of your particularly twisted brilliance being tainted!

...Reaction to "The Sopranos" finale was amusing, I thought. Some of the theories of what it all meant are more "out there" than anything David Chase ever conceived, I'm sure. I especially enjoyed the way everyone on Philly sports talk radio, WIP, picked the corpse clean. Ray Diddinger, one of the best minds on football and usually a very soft-spoken fellow, was angry because he felt it was Chase's job to really END the show, not give us all twenty-seven ways to interpret the final scene. Something concrete. Something black and white. Something that wouldn't give us the heartburn that usually comes with sausage and peppers. Tony's head on a platter, side of clams, probably. Something that would, of course, negate the approach to this material displayed consistently by Chase in every episode since the beginning of the series.

There was NEVER anything black and white or finite about "The Sopranos." Me? I thought the last show and the entire run were nothing short of brilliant, like its creator and the many players, especially Gandolfini and Falco. Like everyone, I screamed at the cable company when the screen went black. Later I decided it was Tony starting over again, clean slate. Trying to have a life of meaning. Fooling himself that he will do what it takes to make that happen. Trying to be grateful, in that moment, to have his family there with him. Safe. Coping. The tension in that diner was lovely and meant to fool, I think (and didn't you adore that death sequence in the train store the previous episode?...sorry, Bobby!). All those shots of "normal" people, families, together, happy. At the last, Tony wanting to be normal in a way he never will be...

Kudos to the Hillary campaign for doing a takeoff on the finale to announce her new campaign song. I thought she and Bill were cute and funny there. Love or hate her, it's very smart politics to get that side of her out there... Way to go, Ellen, on Emmy #3, beating "The View." The problem with giving Rosie and Joy Behar an Emmy is that you have to give one to Babs and Elizabeth, too... Enjoy the summer!

MUHLBERG SUMMER MUSIC THEATRE

THE EMPEROR'S NEW CLOTHES - a delightful musical comedy for children ages 4 - 12 Book and lyrics by Lynn Ahers, Music by Stephen Flaherty. An original musical based on the classic tale by Hans Christian Andersen.

The Emperor's New Clothes: June 27-August 4, Wed-Thu-Fri at 10 a.m. & 1 p.m. and Sat 10 am Studio Theatre, Trexler Pavilion for Theatre & Dance. Tickets $9 General Admission.

Lynn Ahers and Stephen Flaherty, the talented writers of the hit Broadway musicals Ragtime and Suessical, add song and dance and a castle full of characters to Hans Christian Andersen's classic and delightful tale - The Emperor's New Clothes. In this stage musical for children, Emperor Marcus the Third is only 14 years old. As he worries how he can possibly run an empire, he foolishly accepts the credo that "clothes make the man" and soon finds himself in a royal mess! Directed by Muhlenberg alum Phil Haas, The Emperor's New Clothes is a story that will appeal to adults and children alike. Set in the 1920s, its energy, fun, and charisma conceal an underlying moral that audiences will carry with them long after the performance is over. "You realize that friends, your heart, love, all come first. Everything else is second," explains Haas.

Visit the website or call the box office to receive a complete season brochure. The mainstage subscription season of the summer program includes Nunsense, Fiddler on the Roof, and Pump Boys & Dinettes. Each performs Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m., with NEW Saturday afternoon performances at 2 p.m. designated as 'Family Day' shows. For these performances only, one youth ticket is offered free for each adult or senior ticket purchased for the same show. These free youth tickets are not available online. Please call or email to reserve Family Day tickets.

SUMMER THEATRE BOX OFFICE INFORMATION -- Tickets to THE EMPEROR'S NEW CLOTHES are available by calling the Theatre Box Office (484-664-3333) in the Trexler Pavilion for Theatre & Dance on the Muhlenberg College campus or by visiting the website at www.summerbroadway.org. The Box Office is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are $9, with a special group rate of $7 for 15 or more. For information on group sales, please email: boxoffice@muhlenberg.edu

LIZ OUT LOUD BERKS GRANT MONEY?

By Liz Bradbury

A few weeks ago we received an email flyer that said:

Focus Group for: Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Parents of Adoptive, Foster Care, and Biological Children. Purpose: Discuss and Assess Support Needs for LGBT Parents and their Children. Who: For LGBT Residents of Berks County. When: Monday, June 25, 2007, 7 pm - 9 pm. Where: Kissinger Lutheran Church, Wyomissing. Supported by: Pride Bride (sic) Builders of Diakon Family Life Services. Dr. Jen Schlegel, PhD and Mark E. Kenney M.Ed., NCC, LPC. Sponsored by: The Diversity Alliance Fund of Berks County Community Foundation (BCCF). For Additional Information Contact: Ms. Louisa Weber, 610-682-1337.

PDN received a $20,000 grant 1 1/2 years ago from the BCCF to expand and circulate the Valley Gay Press into Berks County. And we've been successful. We expanded our Berks VGP mailing list from 5 to more than 300 GLBTA people. We added a Berks columnist, we increased the paper by 4 pages to add extensive Berks information and we added a dozen Berks drop-off spots. And with the help of BCCF grant money through PFLAG, we now circulate the VGP through all Berks public libraries. We've worked with Berks groups like Reading Pride, and we've done presentations to Berks organizations like Berks Women in Crisis, Reading PFLAG, Berks County GSA, Fountainhead Books and at the Reading Pride Fundraiser. And we've expanded our website Resource list to include many Berks County resources, businesses and orgs.

Meanwhile, Spectrum at Reading Planned Parenthood got a $15,000 grant to begin their GLBTA youth support meetings and has been directly supporting 20 to 35 GLBT youth every week for over a year. The grant money for both PDN and Spectrum is about to run out. Costs for direct services are high, but both groups have done an excellent job fulfilling the mission of the National Lesbian and Gay Community Funding Partnership which gave the BCCF $100,000 in matching grant funds. The NLGCFP earmarks its grant money to be used specifically for GLBT equality and justice.

So, we were interested in what Diakon Lutheran Family Service had done with the reported $60,000 they received from BCCF to support the Berks GLBT community.

The first thing I did was check the credentials on line for both Dr. Jen Schlegel, PhD and Mark E. Kenney M.Ed. I couldn't find anything for Dr. Schlegel and I was surprised to see on his web site that though Mark Kenney had done a great deal of work with his wife on interracial family support, he did not list any GLBT issue presentations. Still it's the work, not the creds, that matter so we decided to go to the meeting and ask questions.

At Kissinger Lutheran Church, the only person there introduced herself as Louisa Weber. By 7:10 pm no one else had shown. We were surprised to learn that Dr. Jen Schlegel and Mark E. Kenney were not coming. Ms. Weber explained that it had not actually said they would be there in the text of the flyer. After I explained I was doing a VGP article, Ms. Weber told us, (when I asked), that neither Schlegel nor Kenney was GLBT. She went on to explain that this was not a presentation about the work that Diakon was doing, it was a focus group to get GLBT parents to tell Diakon about their needs. Meeting advertising had been sent out through Swan - the PAAoption Network and an email to Reading PFLAG.

Ms. Weber told us that there had been one previous meeting that was attended by (at most) two couples. Those couples indicated that one of their needs was a place for their kids to meet with other GLBT family youth. I asked if they were told that there are several places in the area for kids of GLBT families to share or be social with other GLBT family kids: Spectrum, Haven, Rainbow Families, MCC, PFLAG, the High School GSAs, GLORA. (All those groups are mentioned in the VGP.) But no, they hadn't been told that. Ms. Weber said that the previous couples had promised to come to this meeting and bring other GLBT parents. I asked, "Why do you think they did not come back?" No response.

She said Dr. Schlegel had been working in the last year, "To see if there is room in the school system to provide support for youth dealing with their identities." Ms. Weber also told us that Diakon had held a focus group for GLBT elders to assess their needs. 12 people had attended. Among the elder's suggestions: Diakon should give domestic partner benefits to its employees and, retirement housing and care for GLBT seniors. Ms. Weber told us that the Lutheran Senior care facility in Topton would have to work to educate its staff and residents to be GLBT supportive and that Diakon does not give benefits.

Ms. Weber said I should call the coordinators for further answers. So instead of asking questions, I pointed out a few things: 1. Straight advertising often doesn't reach the GLBT community. 2. Meeting attendees often prefer places that do not have exclusionary policies. Lutherans will not hire GLBT people to be their leaders and do not recognize GLBT families. Would they expect racial minority members to come to a place that would not hire them or recognize their relationships? 3. It seems counterproductive to keep asking people what their needs are - wouldn't it have been better to just hire a consultant that already knew what the needs of GLBT families were? 4. And finally: It was distressing that though Diakon has had $60,000 for 1 1/2 years it seems to have not used a penny for direct services for GLBT people. Working, "To see if there is room in the school system to provide support," is many steps away from actual support. The meeting ended at 7:38 pm.

Let's hope that Diakon has a plan for direct service to the GLBT community that Ms. Weber just didn't know about. Stay tuned.

TWO FATHERS ARE BETTER THAN NONE

A friend recently sent us an email with a copy of a recent Time magazine article by Sarah Blaffer Hrdy and Mary Batten, titled "The Psychology of Fatherhood." Not minimizing the potential role of fathers in the family at all, this article was truly appropriate for the Father's Day season and in its take on fatherhood. It focuses in on the reality that fathers do not or are not able to spend as much time in their children's lives as they should. But, it goes on to point out the potential that fathers do have in raising children; noting that in some South African cultures more than one man may take on fatherly duties in a family. Maybe fathers in our society are not given as much credit as they deserve or do not realize the impact they can make in the lives of their children.

Our son Lucas is being brought up by two fathers... us. Thank goodness there are two of us. It's hard to imagine going it alone. How do single mothers do it? Or married women with husbands that don't get home from work until the children are ready for bed? Or single fathers? Yikes. As two dads trying to raise just one child we feel we deserve at least a small handicap. So far it has been a bumpy ride. From the initial adoption process, to trying to comfort a crying baby, ... feeding, changing, teething, potty training...and that is the easy stuff. We have not hit the pre-teen and teen years, God forbid. That is years away.

We have been lucky. We know a lot of moms. They have been a big help to us. We would have been lost without them. We admire the moms. They seem to be able to do it all. And the lesbian moms, wow...they are like supermoms. When two ladies get together and start a family, the motherhood instinct just seems to multiply tenfold and they can do anything. We are in awe of them. We have seen them in action. One is breastfeeding the baby and doing laundry and the other one is building a crib, with one hand, and taking a call on the cell phone from work in the other, all in the time it took us to figure out which is the front and which is the back of a diaper. Yeah, this was the easy stuff all right.

Lucas is three now. Maybe this is the easy stuff. He can walk, he can talk, he can get up and turn the TV on and watch while we sleep in a bit longer (not really sleep...that's not possible with a toddler toddling, but we can lie awhile longer). He is potty trained and proud of it. He tells everyone that he pooped in the potty. He answers the phone and tells the telemarketers that he pooped in the potty. Thank you, Lucas. We got scratched off one more list.

So, it looks like the two dads have come along OK and are getting a bit of respite right now. We need it because, we know we will be raising this boy for the rest of our lives. A parent's role never ends. So to all you gay fathers out there, hang in there, we feel for you, but you have a lot of potential...so go for it. To all you mothers out there, we just have to say you are just so awesome.

RAGS TO RICHES TAKE THE FIRST STEP

by Denise McKelvey

Dear Denise, Could you please provide my partner and me with some quick tips as to how to improve our financial situation? I'm tired of living from pay check to paycheck, but we've been unable to save any money for an extended period of time and it's placed a huge strain on our relationship. Signed, Hand to Mouth

Dear H2M, To get you on track for taking control of your financial situation. Consider trying these 8 steps.

1. SAVE: Do not confuse saving money with spending less, as in "I save money when I buy things on sale." Saving money means you actually put money into a safe place for some future time. Do that. Starting right now and forevermore, make it a rule that you will put some amount of your paycheck into a savings account before you spend any of it. Make it automatic and you won't miss what you don't see. Goal: 10% of all you receive goes into savings.

2. GIVE: It truly is amazing what can happen when you give money to those in need. It comes back tri-fold. Sounds silly, but try it.

3. LIVE: Rein in your lifestyle so that it fits into 80 percent of your net income. You don't need half of what you purchase. The sneakers you have will carry you thru the next season. They may be one year out of style, but no one has ever told me that my sneakers are not trendy enough and if they do...NEXT.

4. CREDIT: You need only one credit card. Pick the MasterCard or Visa you or your partner have had for the longest time and cut up ALL of the others. If you have a balance on the one card you will keep, do not carry it with you. You have given up that privilege until you are able to pay it down to zero every month. I personally am an advocate of each you and your partner maintaining your own credit card independently.

5. DEBT: The only debt safe for you and your partner should carry is secured debt (mortgage, auto or anything with collateral). All others are dangerous to your wealth. Design a plan that allows you to pay off all your credit-card debts quickly.

6. CASH: It's proven that you will spend about 30 percent more if you depend on plastic to pay for day-to-day spending. Leave the plastic at home. Live as much as possible with cash. Inconvenient? Yes...that's the point.

7. PLAN: Our society wants you to believe that living spontaneously brings freedom. Just the opposite is true. Have you ever come out of a bar and said, "Where did all my money go?" You need to have a spending plan (a way that you "pre-spend" your paycheck on paper) so that you know ahead of time where the money will go. Write it down and then stick to it.

8. GET SUPPORT: Know that you are not alone—there are thousands of people getting control of their financial lives, too. Go to www.everydaycheapskate.com to sign up to receive daily support and encouragement in your e-mail box. No one said this was easy. You both have continued to do what you have always done for an extended period of time. Change is difficult.

I certainly hope that these 8 steps have encouraged you and your partner to start somewhere in achieving wealth.

CONDITIONAL LOVE

Is it written in stone somewhere that we have to back our gay and lesbian sisters and brothers no matter what? I hope not. Cause a couple of them are pissing me off. I used to love them but now they receive more notoriety for their misbehavior than their talent. There are minor infractions.

Case in point: How many times can George Michael be fined and do community service before they toss his butt in the pokey? That's right I used butt and pokey in the same sentence. I was a huge Wham! fan that followed George throughout his solo career. Unfortunately, George has been mad the world since he was outed by an undercover officer seeking pleasure in a public restroom in LA. I saw him rant against the audience at the Equality Rocks concert at the Millennium March in DC. And, he's still an angry, bitter 40-something year old who needs to fade away or find something that motivates him to care about himself and others. How about a Wham! reunion tour? What could Andrew Ridgely possibly be doing these days? Aside from not getting arrested every couple of months for drug use, I mean.

The current major infraction: What the heck is going on with Rosie O'Donnell? I loved her inclusion to the panel of four on the View. One, because it meant no one would have to hear from Star Jones again. Two, she is a truly gifted comedienne and she is one of the most generous hosts on TV. Right from the get-go, it was really Rosie's The View. Like Diana Ross & the Supremes. Anyway, she wanted The View to be controversial, but left after a spat with Elizabeth Hasselbeck, an opinionated conservative for sure, but not really one of the great minds of the century. This was too challenging for our Rosie? She only had a few weeks left on her contract. She acted like and looked to millions of "View"ers like a spoiled brat. Then we see her drinking beer while attending her website and blog.

I've written before in this space what a breath of fresh air Rosie O'Donnell was to daytime television. Now, she could use a good rinse of Listerine, followed by an Altoid topped off with a tongue scraping. Since her departure she has gone on to dish and insult her former View co-hosts and others. Rosie is currently a bully who is unable to play by anyone's rules but her own, that she makes up as she goes along. She's even using the stage of Cyndi Lauper's unifying True Colors Tour as a platform for her hate-filled brand of humor.

Rosie and to a lesser degree George, need to realize that therapy, not the stage, is the best place to work on their bitterness. There's a difference between playful hate like Kathy Griffen and Margaret Cho. Maybe they're not playing, but I feel like they are, and I'm in on the joke. Rosie just seems bitter and angry and I don't want to hear it anymore.

Latest word is that she was contacting the production team behind The Price is Right about replacing Bob Barker. Is your brow furrowed like mine right now? I can see Ellen hosting "Price...", but Rosie? Rosie could start a new game show called: The Price is Wrong and Go to Hell, Especially if Your Name is Donald or Trump or Elizabeth or Hasselbeck or Kelly Ripa or any Variation of Those Names With Others to be Added Later at my Discretion.

GLBT RETIREMENT COMMUNITIES

Where are you going to spend your retirement years? Have you thought about it? At least one third of lesbian and one fifth of gay male households have children, but every parent knows it's a gamble to count on living with you kids in old age. Your retirement may be your most important investment, more important than many other big ticket costs. Remember there are scholarships and financial aid for kids to go to college, but there are no scholarships for retirement.

While it may not be for everyone, lots of aging baby boomers consider GLBT residential communities as a retirement option as a way to ensure opportunities for GLBT socialization and support. Today many GLBT residential communities provide transitional living opportunities for their residents. That appeals to many seniors who fear they will face discrimination from health and social services providers in mainstream retirement settings or that they will be forced back into the closet in order to get by as they age and require increasing levels of support. Beside the amenities GLBT vacation and retirement communities tout in their promotional materials, I recommend you consider several things that may not be included:

1. Do the laws of the state or jurisdiction where the village is located protect your civil rights? Is the community at large welcoming?

2. Are the community association rules consistent with your values and life style? Association rules can be quite restrictive. Many GLBT baby boomers have waited for retirement to come out because they feared loss of financial security due to job discrimination. Some see coming out in retirement as an opportunity to become more politically and socially active. But don't assume that because it's a GLBT identified community, it will be out and proud. We looked at a lesbian community in St. Augustine that was incredibly closeted. And after friends of ours bought a condo in another popular GLBT residential community, they were told not to display any rainbow flags or bumper stickers because other residents were afraid that neighbor's rainbow flags would out them to their homophobic children and family. Ultimately they moved because they weren't comfortable being even more closeted than they had been in their former mainstream neighborhood.

3. Do the community's programs and activities fit your interests and financial situation?

4. Does the community discriminate based on age? Many retirement communities are for persons over 50 and do not permit children.

5. Does the complex have or plan to develop assisted living and/or nursing home facilities?

Forty-seven percent of GLBT baby boomers want to spend their last days in their own homes and one in five fear dying alone. Some retirement communities have life transition plans where as your health status changes you can easily move from one level of independence to another without having to relocate outside the complex. Transition options keep an aging individual close to the friends and family of choice they have developed in the community.

There are a variety of established GLBT retirement communities. These communities include a residential hotel for men in Ohio, trailer parks in the Sun Belt, specialized care facilities in urban centers and a range of homes and home-sites for individuals and families. For links to examples of GLBT communities and the services they offer go to our web site: www.padiversity.org and check retirement communities in the Resource section.

We believe it would improve the quality of life in the Lehigh Valley if all people were equally protected from unfair discrimination based upon actual or perceived: race, color, religion, national origin, ancestry or place of birth, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status, family status, age, disability or use of a guide animal, in the areas of employment, housing, and public accommodation.

QUOTE #1

"This legislation is critical to thousands of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender Pennsylvanians who are trying to work and have a roof over their heads. I urge the legislature to move this legislation forward. It is needed. It is fair. It is time," - Stacey Sobel, executive director of Equality Advocates Pennsylvania.

QUOTE #2

The (Civil Rights Bill)'s sponsor, Rep. Dan Frankel (D) told a news conference that without a civil rights law Pennsylvania at a competitive disadvantage with surrounding states Maryland, New Jersey and New York that already have legislation. "More and more people inside and outside this building understand that being gay or transgendered has nothing to do with your ability to fix a car or computer, to show up on time and to do a good day's work," Frankel said.

"We are very encouraged by the record number of legislators who have signed on as co-sponsors of this bill and we think it is a good sign for future progress," - Larry Frankel, legislative director of the ACLU of Pennsylvania.

QUOTE #4

"Our lives begin to end the day we become silent about things that matter." - Martin Luther King, Jr.

QUOTE #5

"The City of Philadelphia's Home Rule Charter and the City's Fair Practices Ordinance reflect broad City policy abhorring discrimination and the Boy Scouts' policy and conduct is directly contrary to the principles of equal access and opportunity enshrined in Philadelphia law....[T]he City's ongoing subsidy of a discriminatory organization through the allowance of free use of a building is directly contrary to the City's policy and practice of refusing to support discrimination, and of ensuring non-discriminatory access to City benefits."

-Philadelphia City Council voting to terminate the 1928 ordinance granting the Boy Scouts' Cradle of Liberty Council rent-free use of a building in Philadelphia due to its practice of sexual orientation discrimination.

QUOTE #6

"The other side may continue to score a few points, but I think most of them now understand they are going to lose." - Evan Wolfson, head of Freedom to Marry

VALLEY GAY PRESS BOOK REVIEW

"Gayellow Pages US/Canada" edited by Frances Green $23.95

The Gayellow Pages is an GLBT information institution. It's been around for nearly 35 years, giving GLBT people and their friends ready access to information on what kind of gay friendly services are available in every US State and Canada. Easy to follow data is arranged alphabetically by state and then city. Each location includes a list of businesses and organizations arranged alphabetically by type. There are separate sections especially for women only, ethnic/multicultural, and Canada. The company also produces international and regional guides.

Sure, one could always search on-line and probably find even more specific GLBT data, but there's a portability and readability about the Gayellow Pages that makes it essential for any GLBT traveler, even if it's just for a day trip. Moving to a new community? Going away to college? Visiting the relatives for the Holidays? Grab the Gayellow Pages to tell you what's there and what's welcoming.

And on the other side of the coin, any organization can list themselves for free in the Gayellow Pages by contacting the editor and then just filling out a form. Many Lehigh Valley organizations, businesses and groups are listed. If yours isn't, contact: gayellowpages.com to list.
